

Lindsey's
Three-
Point
Oahu
Shopping
Guide

Owen's and Co. is the perfect Chinatown stop for everything local, from Salvage Public tees and a.wattz friendship bracelets to 'ili coffee scrubs and soap made from Hawaiian lilikoi fruit. It's one of my favorite neighborhood stores, and my No. 1 stop for gift shopping!

Aloha Superette is the newest boutique on the block, located in the heart of Kailua. Owned by the founder of Samudra, it carries her whole collection of goods, including clutches, bikinis, pareos, and totes with beautiful Hawaiian backdrops. Almost every girl in Honolulu owns one of her clutches, and the designs are perfect for any day or occasion here in Hawaii.

Number 808 is Haleiwa's hidden gem! They carry the coolest Hawaiian vintage goods, beautiful clothing by brands like Black Crane, and just cool stuff in general. I can never leave the North Shore without taking a peek.

On Honolulu Style

Lindsey Higa, 29, stylist and blogger

FASHION*How would you describe your personal style?

A blend of feminine island chic and tomboy that tends to be more minimal.

Where did the name of your style blog, Pineapple Ice, originate?

I named it after one of my favorite drinks. There's this place called Hank Haute Dogs that I used to always go to for their pineapple ice slushies—the most refreshing drink on a hot day.

How does the heat affect Hawaiians' wardrobes?

We're always prepared for anything, whether traveling from the beach to cocktails or taking a picturesque hike and ending with an ono [delicious] lunch. Easy and transitional pieces are key.

What's the sartorial vibe in the Hawaiian capital?

Beachy, casual, very laid-back. Our lifestyle revolves around the outdoors and the ocean.

Any tips for visitors?

Pants during the day are hard, unless you're indoors. Flowy dresses, denim shorts, and anything else breezy are my go-tos.

Tell us about today's look.

All-white looks are so clean and crisp, but I love throwing it off with small pops of color. I stayed tropical with my woven bag from local brand Avela and shell earrings by a.wattz, also local. Then I threw in some tomboy with my men's collared shirt from Hawaiian label Salvage Public, and wide-leg denim pants from Citizens of Humanity, before finishing it off with a bit of femininity in my silver heels from J. Crew. The sunglasses are Carla Colour.

BY SARA LIEBERMAN
PHOTOGRAPHY BY
DESMOND CENTRO

BOARDING PASS

You'll be saying "Aloha" in no time with one of United's flights to Honolulu from all of the airline's hubs. Find more information at united.com.